THE PACIFIC Commercial Advertiser.

Napoleon's Address to the Legislature of France.

At the opening of the French Legislative Chambers, on the 22d of January, Napoleon delivered the following address:

Messieurs les Senateurs, Messieurs les Deputes! The opening of the Legislative session permits of a periodic exposition of the situation of the Empire and the expression to you of my views.

As in preceding years, I will examine with you the principal questions which interest our country abroad. Peace seems assured everywhere, for everywhere the means are sought for of amicably settling difficulties, in place of ending them with the sword.

The meeting of the English and French fleets in the same ports has shown that the relations formed upon the field of battle have not been weakened. This has only cemented the agreement of the two countries.

In regard to Germany, my intention is to continue to observe a policy of neutrality, which, without preventing us at times from being displeased or satisfied, leaves us nevertheless strangers to questions in which our interests are not directly engaged.

Italy, recognized by almost all the powers of Europe, has strengthened its unity by inaugurating its capital in the centre of the peninsula. We may count upon the scrupulous execution of the treaty of the 15th of September, and upon the indispensable maintenance of the power of the Holy Father.

You have shared with me the general indignation produced by the assassination of President Lincoln, and recently the death of the King of the Belgians, has caused the same indignation.

In Mexico the government, founded upon the will of the people, is being consolidated. The opposition, conquered and dispersed, has no longer a chief. The national troops have displayed valor, and the country has found guarantees of order and security which have developed its resources.

The municipal elections are conducted with the greatest order and with the most entire liberty. The laws upon coalitions which give rise to some apprehensions, have been carried out with strict impartiality on the part of those interested.

The working class, intelligent as it is, has comprehended that the more facility is accorded to it to discuss its interests, the more it is bound to secure the liberty of each and the security of all.

The inquiry into the co-operative societies has come to demonstrate how just were the bases of the law which has been laid before you on this important subject. This law will permit the establishment of numerous associations to the benefit of labor and profligence.

Natural enemies of the development of them, I have decided that authorization to meet together shall be accorded to all those who, outside of politics, may desire to deliberate respecting their industrial and commercial interests. This liberty will be limited except by the guarantees which public order requires.

The equitability of the budget is secured by a surplus of revenue. In order to attain this result it was necessary to effect economy in the greater part of the public services, amongst others in the War Department.

The army being on a peace footing, there was only the alternative of reducing either the regimental cadres or the effective. The latter measure was impracticable, since the regiments hardly mustered the necessary strength of men.

The good of the service counselled even their augmentation. By suppressing the cadres of 250 companies, 40 squadrons and 40 batteries, but dividing the men among the remaining companies and squadrons, we have rather strengthened than weakened our regiment.

The budget of the Public Works and that of Education have not undergone any diminution. It was of duty to preserve to the grand enterprises of the State their fertile activity, and to maintain the energetic impulse of public instruction.

Agriculture has made great progress since 1852. At the moment it suffers from the lowering of the price of cereals. That depreciation is the necessary consequence of the plenty of the harvests, and not the suppression of the sliding scale.

It will, I am convinced, confirm the principles of commercial liberty. In the midst of always increasing prosperity, unquiet spirits, under the pretext of discussing the liberal progress of the Government, would hinder it from marching by taking from it all force and initiative.
